Many are weighing in on ways to better the author experience from the editor and publisher perspective. But what's the opinion of actual scholars?

We decided to ask: <https://lnkd.in/gGkWstKb>

"Portugal had tortured me in 2013, so I request Scholastica to help me to submit to a law journal since August 24th, 2023, as it actually solicits these requests. E.g. I requested on this LinkedIn webpage on December 22nd, 2023. Cf. HTTPS://Gloucester.Insomnia247.NL/Scholastica_or_LinkedIn_connivance/2023-12-22b_fee-waiver_request.pdf I noticed on January 16th, 2024 that the appearance de this request does not continue on this LinkedIn webpage. I never get an answer to this request. Are "Animal Farm: A Fairy Story" and "Nineteen Eighty-four" concealing truths again? Scientific organizations are not supposed to suppress science. This is a subject access request asking who suppress or suppresses a request by myself to Scholastica on LinkedIn and why?" said I myself a few seconds ago at the original LinkedIn version.

This legally binding subject access request as on this original LinkedIn webpage became hidden in under 19 hours. Cf.

Connivance at torture is complicity.
